The marvellous success which has attended the operations of the gallant soldier, Gen. Napier, throughout the Abyssinian expedition, has brought his name so prominently before the world again that every body is desirious of knowing who he is. His personal lineage we cannot learn beyond that he does not belong to the 'fighting Napiers' as they are familiarly called. There are two branches, we believe, of this distinguished family; one Scotch, the other Irish; and the probability is, that Sir Robert Napier, K. C. B., the subject of this notice, belongs to the latter. His military career, however although confined to India and China is very brilliant. He commenced life in the Royal Engineers, 15th Dec., 1876, and is now Commander-in-Chief at Bombay, Lieut-General and Military member of the Council of the Governor General of India The wisdom of the English Government in appointing such a man, whose instincts have been sharpened by a lile's intercourse with savage and treacherous aborigines, but of great subtlety and military prowess, is obvious from the wonderful success attending his operations from the beginning. To ap-ber Sir Robert marched his army some 300 miles through a hostile and extremely dangerous country, without meeting a single check, experiencing a single want, or suffering a single casualty worth mentioning, smidst the usual amount of croaking at home and abroad, and with one blow, as it were obtained a victory so complete and decisive that he presents us with the end before we thought he had reached the beginning. History offers nothing so brilliabt in the annals of war for centuries, especially when we remember that the Abyssinian army was neither small, ill supplied with modern arms por destitute of fighting qualities. Sir Robert no doubt, will again receive, as he deserves, the thanks and honors of parliament, the gratitude of his county, and the approbation of his sovereign. Such a life is an ornament to his nation, and is worthy a prominent niche in the temple of military fame, the last distinction we can pay in tribute to a man who devotes a long and brilliant career to the service of his country: General Napier commenced in the Sutlej in 1845-6; was in the battles of Mcudkee, Ferozehah and Sobraon; received medal and two clasps was with Wheeler at the taking of Kot Kangra; was through the Panjaub war and present at all the principal engagements from Mooltan to the surprise of Atock, received medal and two clasps; was through the Indian mutiny under Outram from the Topee, received medal and three clasps commanded 2nd division of China Expedi-Relief of Lucknow to the capture of Fantia tion, and for that service received meda with two clasps and promotion to Major General. This is but a synopsis of his brilliant career for which he several times received the thanks of Parliament, and the English and Indian Governments besides the #### Legislative Council.

THE CONFEDERATION ADDRESS TO HER MAJESTY. · Hon De Cosmos-Although the present was one of the most important questions ever brought before this Legislature, it would be unnecessary for him to dwell upon subject at that moment, as it must be fresh in the recollection of hon members, but when the question was brought before the Council last year, the question had been decided in affirmative by an almost unanimous difference between the periods was only verbal, the Dominion being reed cent toa bed doidw, sometize at woa created. This however, would now enable them to take final measures, which at that time were not possible. The people of Canada desired Un on with this country, or Canada destred Un on with this country, and the Imperial Government was undoubtedly in favor of it. His Excellency the Governor had come to see its advanatges, and the people of this Colony looked anxiously forward to Confederation. The anxiously loward to Collectation. The hon gentleman then proceeded to explain the advantages of the condition—as set forth in the address, that would accrue to this Colony on Confederation. He said England had lerself around with Colonies, belied lerself around with Colonies, but Canada was the only instance of a colony colonizing. She would therefore be as a mother to us, assisting and protecting us. Her annual contribution of $230,000 could not be balanced unless we had a population of at least 20 or 30 thousand, her lostering care would then be repaid her a hundred cate would then be repaid her a hundred fold. The Government of Canada had no wish to remove the officers who held posiwish to remove the officers who held posi-tions in this colony, under the present Gov-ernment; on the contrary, the desire on the part of Canada would be to retain all, in the country. The great object of Confed. ation was to consolidate all British America, and this was the most favorable moment for that consummation. If we allowed the present favorable moment to pass, the feeling of the Canadian people would be occupied with new desired to cast in our lot with them, we might not be able to obtain such favorable terms. All that the Canadian Government terms. All that the Canadian Government required us to do, was to make known our desires to Her Majesty's Government, in the manner proposed is this address, and backed up by the Canadian Government, we should be certain of success.

Hon Wood said he would propose an amendment to the resolution of the hon member tor Victoria as follows: "That this Council, while confirming their vote of last session, in favor of the general principle of the desirability of the Union of this Colony with the Dominion of Canada, to accomplish the consolidation of British interests and institutions in North America, are still without sufficient information and experience of the probable working of Confederation in the North American Provinces, to admit of the Confederation until the intervening terri-

this amendment; it would be necessary for him to advert to several topics. The desire for Confederation was not so universal as had been stated, and although superficially it appears to be received with layor, yet this was not the fact, to the extent supposed. A number of persons at Victoria had chosen to meet, and had assumed to represent the feelmeet, and had assumed to represent the feet-ings of this colony, on the subject of Con-federation. They had entered into commu-nication with the Canadian Government, a most reprehensible proceeding in which they were wholly unauthorized. Their taking on were wholly unauthorized. Their taking on themselves to pledge the colony to a certain course was affronting to this Council, and an insult to the intelligence of the people of this Colony. This Council was the proper body to communicate with the Government of the Dominion. They had paraded the resolutions drawn up and voted by themselves, as representing the voice of the whole colony. He had no desire to depart representing the voice of the Ile had no desire to depart whole colony. He had no desire to depart from his voe of 1867, in this Council, be-cause Union was doubtless advisable, that is, Union on fair and aqual terms. They would have been foolish not to vote for such Union on terms such as hon members had some sort of misty idea, a sort of Confederation of which they should be proud to form a part. But it must be remembered that was taken on 29th of March, two days before the termination of the session, and they then had not the slightest means of knowing upon what terms they were to be joined to the Confederation. The hon member had alluded to the nature of the Legislature of the Dominion. He tells us that we should be entitled to three members in the House of Commons, and two in the Senate. That is, we should have 181 in the Commons against 3, and 82 in the Senate against 2. With such overwhelming numberst against us, what chance had making our voices heard? Why, we should be entirely drowned, absolutely engulphed. When we look at the terms on which we have to ask in our povetty stricken way to be Government had recommended our waiting till discover how it would benefit us, as we should be looked at as only forming a paltry tringe for the Dominion, and should be com pletely overborne. It would be most im-Government of which we know so little, from which we are not likely to receive the consideration that we do from that under which we live. When he voted for Confederation last year, he looked upon the subject as merely suggestive. There was nothing tangible at that time, and with other hon members, he did not conceive he was committing himself to any defined course. He had not the remotest idea of the paltry figure we were likely to out as part of the Confederation or he would never have voted as he did. He could not see how we could be governed from Ottawa, from which we were separated by so great an extent of country. We should be entirely isolated. How could we communicate with our representations. How could we communicate with our repress-entatieve? how convey our desires? He would much rather remain governed as we are. How could we confide in representa-tion, who were paid by the Government to which they were delegated? He had no confidence in professional politicians, who usually occupied themselves more with their own private interests than with the interests of their constituents and agent, professional of their constituents, and every professional politician has private interests. cidedly opposed to pay deputies, men who made politics a business or profession. Confederation at present would be a leap in the dark. It was a very good thing, perhaps, but it was at present on trial; and did not seem to be coming up to the perfection that its advocates would claim for it, as Nova Scotta experience had not convinced that people of its advantages. It was a mere experiment, and it would be better for us to wait till time demonstrated the benefits we should derive from it, than to rush in to a position of which we knew nothing, and whence there was no retreat.

Hon Robson had listened with some surprise to the last speaker in his description of the unauthorized proceedings of the self-constituted Committee at Victoria, arrogating to itself the right of acting in the name of the whole of British Columbia. That action of the Committee was certainly open to objection, as furnishing a handle to the enemies of the cause by which to do it an injury. At the same time he did not say it was a self-constituted committee, speaking as it did the sentiments of the people. The hon gentleman admits that Confederation is desirable, and the resolution of the hon member from Victoria. He did not see how the bon member could reconcite this present action with ins great speech of that session. His rapid transformation, his sudden shear on the back track, was anything but a proof of the hon gentleman's consistency In relation to the danger arising from our inability to communicate with our representatives at Ottawa, the hon gentleman was evidently speaking from his own feelings.
There could be no confidence in such representatives as he would be, as to guard against his endden transitions of mind his constituents would require to be always at his back, in The House was in no danger of being led away by a misap-prebension of the larged equal terms upon which we might enter the Confederation, a8 they were clearly set forth in the able address of the hor member for Victoria. What he had stated were hard matters of fact. We are not further from Ottawa than from Downing Street. Admitted to the Confederation we will be, and we may be against our wills. Our desiny has been fixed by Her Majesty's Government, which desires that the whole of British America shall be under one government. Confederation was as much approved of at home as by the Canadians. There was a strange and unaccountable prejudice against men. Was the man who had lived in a colony 20 or 30 years any worse than a man who had lived only 5 or 6? They were all colonial men, and the sooner they got rid of such prejudices the better. There seemed to be some feeling that in Confederation with Canada we were reparating from Great Brit anin and transferring our allegiance to Canada. There was no idea of separation. Our allegis ance to Great Britain would be no stronger and no weaker. Confederation would rather tend to strengthen our retitions, and make us proud of the name of Britons. He would like to know if the hon gentleman deus proud of the name of Britons. He would bike to know if the hon gentleman desized to wait till we had a preponderance in Canada; as, if such was his idea, Confederation would not take place in his life time. He would like to hear how many years the learned gentleman would like to wait. If he intended to wait till we had what he thought for the property of the state a fair proportion he would have to wait for some time. We shall not have any addition to our population till some change takes place in the Government of the Colony. Had he proposed any practical solution of our difficulties, other than by Confederation, there might have been some reason in his opposition. As it was the position be assumed was inconsistent with his vote of last nession. He (hou Robson) would support the resolution of the hon member for Victoria.

Hon Helmcken conceived it was his duty to say a few words on the subject, and he must say, had he known the course taken by the advocates of Confederation, he would never have voted last session as he did. He would say distinctly that he regretted very their defining the terms on which such a tory was taken into the Dominion, Union would be advantageous to the local interests of British Columbia. In proposing member for New Westminster had said we would be taken in whether we liked it or not. Our destinits are in our own hands. Her Majesty's Government would never compel us to confederate onreelves against (DeCosmos-Nor Canada either.) He telt like | ment a large number of people in this colony. He did not say whether the Confederation was good or bad, but he wanted a little further time to see how the new machine would work; whether it would work harm or not.

There might be some hitch in the machine It was useless talking about terms of admission until the intervening territory was taken over by the Canadians. What was the use of talking about overland roads? They ought to wait a little longer to see what Confederation is. He was perfectly certain that very few of the people of this colony had ever read the Confederation Act, as there were not two copies in the colony. Delay might be beneficial to the Canadian Government at beneficial to the Canadian Government at the present time, There were several vexed questions to be settled, which might cause considerable anxiety to the Dominional Government itself. There was the San Juan difficulty and the acquisition by the United States of the Russian Territory—more particularly the San Juan difficulty, as no one could tell how it might affect the Canadian Government, which was never so unfit as at the present moment to undertake the settlement. If it could be shown that the Colony If it could be shown that the Colony ment. If it could be shown that the Colony would be so much benfitted it would, perhaps, be well to accept Confederation. Because we are poor is no reson why we should sell our brittnight, and with it our best interests. We don't know the intentions of Canada. We don't know what her tariff would be. He was compelled to bring up these things, to show that it would be the utmost impolicy for this colony to commit itself to a position of which nothing is known. The Canadians might have codes of law sable that we Her Majesty's He thought it advisable colony. should wait a little longer.

was settled it depended wheth

adian Government was inclined for litigation, in which case it would be long before they acquired that territory, and until then it would be imprudent to change our allegiance. In case of any grievance our complaints would have to be lodged at Ottawa, not at Downing Street. As a portion of the Dominion we should have no right to go to the Imperial Government. He was not so certain that the Canadian Government had so much milk as would suffice for a large circle, so that she could waste a little on us. The Canadian Government had quite enough to do with the little ones she had, and it was not likely she would bestow the richest milk on this Colony, so that the intervening territory would only get the skim. Such terms as those proposed were only a sort of bait that it was expected we should jump at. If we showed outselves excessively anxious the chances were that all these fine things would dwindle down until they became excessively small. He said this although it was guaranteed by an Imperial Act. Even the present Confederate Act might be altered to suit allered conditions. He did not say they would not act up to the terms. But suppose noted was made in three years, we have no no road was made in three years, we have no remedy. The Act would then be law, but how would we make the Canadian Govern-ment carry out its terms? You may petition Ottawn, but such a small voice as we would have would never be heard in such a large building. We were told Confederation was aure to come, but by whom? Why by the newspapers, and the newspapers of this colere all in the hands of Canadians; and this constant dropping of Canadian water on the flinty colonists was sure to penetrate last. There was nothing ever said for the other side. It was almost certain that peonot see what great prejudice the hon mem-ber for New Westminster alluded to. For his part he could not tell a Canadian from an Old Countryman. We had no desire to belong to a new country. We were very well satisfied with our own country, when it was for Canada, Canada had never offered us any conditions. Depend upon it, whenever this colony wishes to join the Confederacy she can do it. Canada must have this colony if she desires to become a great country and extend from ocean to ocean. The colony is improving, let us go on improving. We shall be able in a short time to stand up and ask for better terms. If Canada desires colony why don't she make us an offer the desire to join us. If she had such an intense desire to suckle us, let her show some of the milk. He was not aware that any one had any authority to make an offer, few people in Victoria care about Confederation The Canodian Government was different from any other government, as it was usual in questions of international policy for one government to treat with another. "his colony might be ruled rather harshly, but if we were confederated we should be tied and bound with fetters far more unweildly than any fastened upon us by the government we any fastened upon us by the government we majority, were not likely to arceoive proper had. Our Correment had always yielded attention at the bright of the present Government, and if the desire of the people, based upon knowledge and experience, was laid before this Council, Confederation would be granted at once. He did not feel inclined to offer any terms, but if that question was before them, he should wish to invert other terms, such as free trade throughout Vancouver Island.

should like to insert, such as, the Capital to be at Victoria, which was much more im-portant than the $110,000 so generously pro-posed. In a short time the colony would be able to maintain itself, then would be the time to go to Canada, not now, when the reason attributed would be that the colony could not maintain itself.

Hon Ball felt bound to say that he did not think they realized the position of chang-ing their allegiance to Canada. It had not been stated what benefits we were to receive from being annexed to Canada. We should on the contrary be hampered in many respects. The bait had been held out of an Overland Road, but what guarantee had we that it would be completed in two years? Even supposing it is completed, is it likely a stream of population would flow into this country from that source? A large country intervenes between us and the Canadian provinces and it would take many years be-fore that would spare us a surplus. When that time arrived, it would then be time for British Columbia to ask to be annexed to Canada. We command the sea gate to the Pacific; a position of the most vital importance to Canada, and it would always secure to us the right to dictate our own terms. Five members in the Canadian Legislature was a mere trifle amongst the large number of representatives in the Canadian Parliament. He would say he thought it premature. He did not think Annexation was inevitable; he would rather that it never happened. He had no wish to be ruled by Ottawa instead onld of Downing Street. He was not opposed to He the power of the Imperial Government; we could get redress from that quarter.

which, once annexed to Canada, there would be little likelihood of obtaining. There were also a lew other small things which he

He should support the amendment.

Hen Pemberton regretted that at that late period of the evening he would only be able to offer a few remarks. There was no official communication from the Canadian Govern-ment before the House. We were just was not the best time for our orginating an offer to the Canadian Government. At least two-thirds of the members present were opposed to Confederation. The question was, do we represent the people? of this he thought there could be no doubt, and he felt it his duty to vote for the amendment. Hon Walkem could not give a silent vote Be believed he would vote in a glorious minority. The amendment was only put-ting off our ultimate destiny year by year. The main reason urged by the hon mem-ber for New Westminster was the larger per for New Westminster was the larger preponderance of representatives at Otlawa. Were not the States and territories of Cali-fornia, Oregon and Washington in a precise-ly similar position with regard to the centre ly similar position with regard to the centre of legislation of that great Republic? yet no complaints had ever been made that justice had not been meted out to them when asked for, or that their voices when raised in Congress or the Sevate were not heard with attention and respect in a artenument mere distance was weak in itself. At Ottawa as at Washington legislation, if properly shaped, would be for the general and federal good and not merely speculative or special. The colony would still possess all the special legislative powers at present confided to it. The only difficulty which seemed to present itself to his mind, was that of finding in a young colony like this stotesmen equal to the occasion; but such a difficulty might perhaps be over-rated. as colonial life was perhaps be over-rated. as colonial in fact: a political school in itself, men from their infancy were made less acquainted with their political In this respect they bore and institutions. a strong resemblance to our American ucighbors, where a thorough and highly creditable knowledge of the evinced by colonists in their public attairs tended in a great measure to supply the deficiency of the political education so amply afforded in European countries. He could not perceive a single proposition in the amendment which merited any serious consideration. What were we parting with that was of so much value? Positively nothing compared with the preprint aid. that was of so much value? Positively nothing compared with the pecuniary aid which we should receive from the other side of the continent. As to any difficulty about San Juan, none existed, as far as the present question was concerned. If the question of property in that Island were not decided before Confederation, it would simply end in its consideration being handed over indirectsettlement. And even supposing that the American Government fairly establishes its claim should this be a cause for the regret which the bon member seens to indulge in. The principles of Confederation itself are on trial, and with their soundness or unsound ness this side issue has no relation whatever, By the proposed terms we sacrifice nothing while on the other hand our public debt wi be paid and an ample provision made for the local Government here. Nothing can be more hollow than the reasons a Ivanced as arguments against the proposed address. Unfortunately the debate on so vital a questional proposed and the second proposed tion had assumed narrowest and most cir-cumscribed limits. Not a single proposition of the address had been dealt with in a states manlike manner; each line of it re-mained intact and uncontroverted; and barren generalities were adapted and used to hide and conceal the ignorance of bon gentlemen who had never read or even thought over a subject of such political importance.

Hon De Cosmos wished to know if any other hon member desired to speak to the other hon member desired to speak to the question.

Hon Young conceived that the hon member for Victoria had afforded them ample time to do so if they chose and they had not availed themselves of the opportunity.

Hon DeCosmos pitted those hon members who had refused to exercise their privilege. who had returned to excercite their privilege.

A smile might pass over the faces of those who had voted one way one year, and then tell us that they were mistaken, in order to vote another way the next year. It was who were paid by the people to do their duty. A revolution ought to occur in this country. Are these the men to legislate for country. Are these the men to legislate for the people, who take no interest in the coun-try? There may be a legal question as to whether these men have a right to heap tax upon tax on the people of this country merely to infeel out at the public erio. He knew the hesitation of these gentlemen to go into the question, their hope of gain would be terminated. Was it any wonder that the people of this country were is discon-tented, when they saw that those who repres-ented them were traitors to their best interests? The bon and learned gentleman from Victoria had dwelt much upon the action of what he styled a self appointed committee.

The fact was simply that the people saw their hopes of setting the question of Confederation, so ardenly desired by the great own hands, which they had a perfect right to might represent the people as not in favor of Confederation, but to this they had given a distinct denial of the meeting at Victoria. What had England ever done for this country, that we must be forced to carry out her particular views in relation to ourselves? Such a course of procedure would never have been attempted towards the Canadian have been attempted towards the Canadian Government. England had given us nothing but a flag. There was the writing on the wall, and there could no longer be any doubt of the destiny of British Columbia. We had found friends among men whose nation would soon extend from the Atlantic the Pacific. We should still be tied to to the Pacific. We should still be fied to Downing street, the country that had belted the globe with her colonies; under whose flag he was born, and under which he hoped to live and die. The bon and learned gentleman had talked about professional paid politicians. Who were the professional paid politicians? was it not the men who earned politicians to the tend who would deadly politicians? Was it not the men who earned their living by it, and who would gladly serve the country, so long as they could secure a good fat salary. We were asked to wait, wait for what? The people never placed him here, and they would wait long if they waited for such as he. His hon colleague from the city of Victoria had changed his mind since last year, and says he would not have voted for Confederation if he had known what he knows now. Every one knew his political history, and he had more than once regretted that he did not take the proper measure in the proper time, to serve his country. He had set up men of straw, that they may be knocked down. His scruple may prevent his assisting in laying the foundation stone of a nation that exists for thousands of years. Why should we not follow the example of the Germans, who were doing away with petty kingdoms, and forming themselves into one great nation, who were doing away with petty kingdoms and forming themselves into one great nation or like our elder cousins, the American people, who were concentrating themselves. His hon triend weeked to remain alone, he had not yet reached her highest point of giory and she would maintain her colshe would maintain her col-long as they were true to them The Americans say they are going to have British Columbia. Our course there is clear, we must attach ourselves to Ottawa is clear, we must attach ourselves to Uttawa in order to prevent their getting it. He was in favor of giving the world to those who would utilize it, give this country therefore to Canada, that people with happy English Jaces may inhabit it. But the hon gentleman does not want this; he wants to postpone it, to put it off. His hon friend would one day he save for this proporation when hy be serry for this procrastication, when by laying the foundation stone on the Pacific, he laying the foundation stone on the Pacific, he could look down to posterity to applaud the acr. The people of this country will be surprised when they hear of the opposition to Confederation in this Council. The British Government had no desire to force this country into Confederation, but if the people want it, it will come. His hon friend should want it, it will come. His bon friend should hereafter be the historian of his prediction. The intervening territory would not be an obstacle, and the Hudson Bay Company would place no obstacle in the way. He had a dispatch from the Canadian Government, which stated that the Canadian Government had sent strong representations to the Imperial Government and they said "pass the Imperial Government and mey can your resolutions for the Overland Road and for subsidy, and send us the address." The Canadians had no objection to the interventions. He was surprised that the ing territory. He was surprised that the hon gentleman dared to stand up and say he did not know whether Confederation was good.

He hoped the newspapers of this country would have the effect stated by the hon ger tlemen on the people, and no doubt he would at last feel the influence bimself. About ten years ago he (bun DeCosmos) had, while connected with one of the local papers, pre-dicted what would be the destiny of this country, and then stated that the whole of the British provinces would be formed into one great country. As to selling our birth-right he did not think, were that the care, that we were making a bad bargain whe we were getting $140,000 a year for it, wit spite of the determination of this Government to keep up officials and reduce the sums hitherto appropriated for education and charity, calling it retrenchment. How could it be selling our birthright when we should be their cquals? Was it selling our birth-right when Vancouver Island was joined to British Columbia? So with respect to Con federation. Did Scotland sell her birth-right when she joined England.

Doc Poisoning .- Poisoned meat, we learn has been scattered about the public park at Beacon Hill and several valuable dogs have lost their lives in consequence; The poison, it is believed, was placed there by a sheep drover from Portland a number of whose animals had been worried by curs; but by virtue of what law or custom the drover assumes the right to scatter poison through a place of public resort for the indiscriminate destruction of dogs is something we cannot clearly understand.

A NUMBER of prominent naval officers and influential private citizens have taken charge of Beacon Hill Race Course, in order to have it put in thorough repair. It is the intention of these gentlemen to revive the sports of the turf amongst us, and bring back in this respect, it possible, the old mely not renty. This will her water to many of our pioneers, and no doubt the public will give all the co-operation in their power to accomplish so desirable an object. An authoritative statement will be made on the subject in a few days.

Ir is suggested that on this bright May Day there should be a general suspension of business as a mark of the gratification felt by our people at the miraculous escape of Prince Altred from death, and the glorious achievements of British arms in Abvasinia. The suggestion should be acted upon. The Legislative Council should also pass an address congratulating Her Majesty.

Royal Artillery.—Holloway's Olntment and Pills.—A serjeant in the Royal Artillery writes, on Lecember 12th, 1862, from Poonamattee.
Madras Presidency, that his right leg, from the ankle to the c-if, was a quagmire of disease and corruption that he was on the hospital roll for twelve months without any improvement in his case; that he, as a forlorn hope, resolved to try Holloway's cliebrated Gintrent and Pills. These soon gave case, expelled the bad humours from the limb, healed the apparently incurable sore, and restored him to sound health. Soldiers and sailors are carnestly recommended to have recurse to these invaluable incelicaments for curing old wounds, sores, or ulcers—more particularly old wounds, sores, or ulcers—more particularly when they have arisen from imprudence, and seem incurable.

and roughness of the skin generally arise from depraved or vitiated humors. Bristol's Sarsap arilla is the best of all known purifiers of the blood and humors. This unfailing detergent neutral zes the poison, and occasional doses of Bristol's Sugarocated Pills, taken at same time, purge out the unhealthy secretions, insuring a smooth, white, soft skin.

OTTAWA, April 28-The House of Commons sat on Saturday with closed doors.
The subject under consideration was the suspicion of being Fenians which has fallen on certain employes of the House. In connection with the assassination of McGee, a message from the Duke of Buckingham relating to the assassination was laid before both Houses. An address conveying their sympathy with Parliament and Her Majesty, expressing indignation at the atrocious crime, was agreed upon in the Senate.
